If you haven't previously logged in, you will be asked to enter your University of Essex username and password. Once entering these, you will be taken you through to the EBSCO interface, with CINAHL selected as the database you want to search (You can then choose additional databases at the top using the 'Choose Databases' option at the top if you want to search multiple databases at once, e.g. CINAHL, Medline, PsycArticles and PsycInfo).

The screenshot shows the EBSCO search interface. At the top, a blue navigation bar contains links: New Search, Publications, CINAHL Subject Headings, Evidence-Based Care Sheets, More, Sign In, Folder, Preferences, Languages, Need help? Ask EssexUni Library, and Help. Below this, the search area is titled "Searching: CINAHL Complete" with a link to "Choose Databases". A red arrow points to this link. Below the title, there is a checkbox for "Suggest Subject Terms". The main search area consists of three rows, each with a text input field, a dropdown menu labeled "Select a Field (optional)", and a "Search" button. The first row has a "Search" button, while the second and third rows have "Clear" buttons. At the bottom, there are links for "Basic Search", "Advanced Search", and "Search History". The University of Essex logo is in the top right corner.
